Renewables in Africa (RiA) announces First WiBA partnership with MNCAA

LONDON, UK / JOHANNESBURG, SA - September 17

Last Thursday, Renewables in Africa (RiA) launched a new initiative: What is Best for Africa? (WiBA). WiBA is a weekly online conversation that will explore the opportunities and challenges Africa is facing in key growth sectors, starting initially with Renewable Energy and Technology.

The conversation will focus on how Africa can position itself in the world map and take advantage of global events that are shaping our lives and economies.

Renewables in Africa is very excited to announce our first partnership with MNCAA Capital Africa Advisors (MNCAA) to develop and grow the WiBA initiative. Tony Tiyou, Chief Executive Officer of RiA declared: "Beyond their expertise and extensive experience in capital raising on the African market, MNCAA has a strong vision for a prosperous Africa and it literally sounded obvious from our initial contact that our interests were converging, and it made sense to join forces".

Initially, WiBA will focus on topical issues in Clean Energy and Technology; however, RiA and MNCAA will maintain an open-minded and flexible approach to include when necessary other sectors that are affecting the two industries that have been chosen. Mansur Nuruddin, Managing Partner of MNCAA had this to say: "We have been involved into multiple transactions in many sectors across the Continent, including several clean energy and technology transactions, and we believe that WiBA will be a powerful platform to initiate positive conversations and develop concrete solutions. We are excited by the opportunity to partner with RiA on this ground-breaking initiative".

The first WiBA conversation is scheduled for Wednesday 19th September from 9am – 10m GMT time and we encourage Industry professionals, suppliers, developers, investors and policymakers to join the platform.
